

1. Both animals are mammals, and they share common mammalian characteristics.
2. The monkey exhibits more characteristics that are similar to a human.

3. The monkey has uniquely primate characteristics, including a greater ability to learn, forward-facing eyes, opposable thumbs, a smaller snout or nose, and generalized teeth.

Copyright © Glencoe/McGraw-Hill, a division of The McGraw-Hill Companies, Inc.

1. What do these two organisms have in common?
2. Which of these two organisms has characteristics that are more similar to a human?
3. What characteristics does the monkey share with humans but not with the other organism?