

3. A change in the weather is one example, as it might encourage people to move indoors.

Copyright © Glencoe/McGraw-Hill, a division of The McGraw-Hill Companies, Inc.

1. Answers will vary. Students should provide examples of situations that they have observed.

2. Answers will vary. Students might suggest that they learn by observing how others act, dress, or talk; by trial and error; and by reading or watching television.

1. Have you ever noticed that sometimes people quickly change to new ways of talking, acting, or dressing? What are some examples that you have seen?
2. How do you think people learn these new behaviors?
3. What environmental factors might change the behavior of the people in the photo?